TO GROVER FROM HORNBLOWER AND PECKHAM
We are going, Grover, going.
Eh! the Mewmup life-time fast!
And the Democratic shadows
Gather on that Senate bust.
Let them arm, oh Grover, raise us,
Hush thy soul and low thine ear:
Listen to the great heart secrets,
Thou, and thou alone must hear.
Though our scared and wimpling legions
Bear their eagles high no more;
Though our wrecked and slugged ambitions
Strew that dreary Senate floor;
Though no mock cuckoo surround us,
Prompt to do their master's will,
We must perish like a Mewmup,
With its neck stretched out for a will.
Let no flippant, sneering snapper
Mock the lions thus laid low;
Twas no foxglove's hand that felled us,
Twas your own that struck the blow;
Yours, who, pilloved on our bosoms,
Turn'd a daisy from party's say;
Yours, who, with great I-amness,
Maddly threw two winks away.
Should the Democratic rabble
Dare assail thy fame for this,
When it comes to glorying Grover,
It will be a look upon our faces.
For behold, the gods bear witness,
Altars, augurs, weatherfares,
For thy sake we now have got it
Where the chicken got the axe.
We are going, Grover, going!
Hark! the Davellillate cry:
They are coming; quick, our courage!
Let us face them, but to die!
Ah! no more, now, large ambitions
Shall our heads extinguish swell;
May the saints and angels guard thee,
Grover, Master, Doss, farewell!

In answer to THE LEDGER's request for the views of our Veterinary Surgeons on the brutal practice of tight reining, we have already printed the letter of Dr. J. D. Quantz.

Today we have the pleasure of giving the views of Dr. Paris Wheeler:

Editor Ledger: Reining horses by gagging or over-checking is cruel and brutal. The side-rein answers well and is severe enough. The gag rein forces the head into an unnatural position. The upper bit holds the head to the animal's mouth and moves it downward and only by a severe effort should the head be pulled the other way. The gag rein forces the head into an unnatural position. DISGRACEFUL.

Pollard-Breckinridge Lawyers Fight in the Courtroom.

Mr. Johnson Considers One of Mr. Shelby's Remarks as an Insult.

And Demands Satisfaction—The Former Slaveholder—Breckinridge and Carle Have a Hand and Then Debauchery Takes a Hand.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—At the close of Dr. Mary Parson's examination in the Pollard-Breckinridge case, a prolonged controversy arose about admitting affidavits. It transpired during the discussion that 100 witnesses had been examined in Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia. Maj. Butterworth, arguing forcibly against allowing the depositions to be filed.

Mr. William G. Johnson, who is assisting Mr. Calderon Carle for the plaintiff, in opposing the motion, contended that the defense was guilty of evasion in endeavoring to keep the depositions out of court. When Mr. Johnson made the remark of chicanery there was a murmur from Mr. Breckinridge, and as Mr. Johnson continued to make the same uncomplimentary remarks they plainly showed their object.

Shortly afterwards, when the court was declared adjourned, at 3:30 o'clock, nearly all the people in the courtroom, including Judge Bradley, passed out through the door reserved for witnesses and jurymen, to the right and back of Judge's bench. Mr. Shelby, Mr. Breckinridge, Col. Phil Thompson, Maj. Benjamin Butterworth, Chas. H. Stoll, W. A. McKenney and Debauchery went out in a body.

At the door of the lobby outside the courtroom, Mr. Calderon Carle and Mr. Johnson were stopped by Mr. Shelby, who had waited there for them.

"Mr. Johnson," said Mr. Shelby, "I consider your remarks to be insulting and demand satisfaction." Then Mr. Shelby slapped Mr. Johnson on the cheek for the latter could say more than "Well, sir!"

Mr. Johnson made a movement to strike his assailant, but the latter placed his body between the two. Just then Col. Breckinridge rushed in with his arms extended.

"Keep your hands off me, sir," cried Mr. Carle, expecting an attack. "You'll suffer for it."

"I intended only to separate them," said Col. Breckinridge indignantly. Mr. Carle raised his hands to avert any hostile intention on Col. Breckinridge's part, and as he did so, somebody struck him on the back of the head.

"Who struck me?" said Mr. Carle, turning quickly. A couple of baillifs were hurrying off through the crowd with Debauchery, and Capt. Leonard, the deputy marshal of the district, told Mr. Carle that he was the one who made the attack.

All this happened in less than time it takes to tell. Mr. Shelby and his brother, counsel for the defense, returned to the courtroom, while Col. Breckinridge remained to make an explanation to Judge Bradley, who had heard of the row, and had come to the court. Mr. Johnson and others also told the judge of the affair, and he promised to settle it Tuesday morning.
